LETTERS

For Shame

Regarding publishing letters that mention President Biden's "dementia" (you received letters objecting to that last week): Well, you did it again. A letter slipped through that mentions Biden's "cognitive" problems. I assume you have a commitment to not publishing disinformation, even in letters to the editor. Please reconsider which mail you publish, as you are usually one of the "sane" media outlets.

Protect Lake Charlevoix Shoreland

Hayes Township officials are violating the zoning ordinance. They would allow wealthy property owners on Anglers Cove to rip out a 30-by-55-foot portion of Lake Charlevoix's Shoreland Protection Strip for a channel, excavate a 120-by-90-foot boat basin, build a two-story boathouse, and dig a 73-foot-wide channel 130 feet out into the lakebed.

Required on every waterfront property, the Shoreland Protection Strip "shall include all of the land area located within 50 feet of the Ordinary High Water Mark" to protect the lake. The ordinance continues: It "shall not be altered more than 20 percent under any condition, except to remove dead trees or shrubs, remove invasive species, or for selective trimming of trees ... When trees are removed, root systems shall be left in place for shoreline stabilization ... Vegetation must cover at least 80 percent of the shoreland." If altered or disturbed, corrective measures are required including "the Shoreland Protection Strip shall be replanted."

These are bright-line laws. No loopholes exist, certainly none that eliminates this protective land, converts it into water, and allows 400 trucks to haul it away. Zoning administrator Ron VanZee, who is also township supervisor, permitted the boathouse based on the faulty conclusion that the OHWM would not move inland after a basin would be excavated and Lake Charlevoix waters fill it. Even the developer's drawings show it would move, and the Army Corps, still considering a federal permit application, agrees.

Though the proposed channel and basin seawalls are structures, no variance was applied for. The ordinance also requires participation by a technical expert group like Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council. A rep from TOMWC was appointed to the Shoreland Protection Committee, but the two Hayes planning commissioners recommended approval without benefit of an expert opinion, and the commission approved it. And the boathouse permit issued in July 2020 automatically expired after a year. Tell Hayes Township officials to stop violating the zoning ordinance and use its powerful language to protect Lake Charlevoix. Attend the Planning Commission meeting, Aug 31. For more information, see ProtectLakeCharlevoixShoreland.org.

PIGEON RIVER:
HOME TO NATION'S
FIRST CARBON CREDITS
PROGRAM ON STATE LAND

Hot on the heels of the even hotter (and we mean that in a very, very bad way) climate report from the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change is some cool Up North news: The nation's first carbon-credits project on state forest land just got the necessary all-clear agreement to happen in Michigan's "Big Wild," aka our Pigeon River Country State Forest.

The pilot project — not-so-efficiently nicknamed the Bluesource/Michigan DNR Big Wild Forest Carbon Project — will leverage the carbon storage capacity of trees on 100,000+ sustainably managed acres of the forest to offer larger industrial gas companies an entire portfolio of carbon offset credits.

Fun fact: A single tree can absorb up to 48 pounds of carbon dioxide a year (that's a whole ton by time a tree turns 40!), and a single carbon credit equals 1 ton of carbon dioxide emission.

Another fun fact: DTE Energy, which will offer carbon offsets to its customers with significantly higher energy usage, has agreed to buy all the carbon credits generated from the Pigeon River Country State Forest during the first decade of the program. The estimated cost: about $10 million. Those payments to the state start in 2022 and will be directed to the state's Forest Development Fund and the Fish and Game Fund for efforts like tree planting, forest infrastructure (roads, bridges, etc.) and wildlife habitat improvements, recreation projects, and more. Search "Bluesource/DNR Big Wild Forest Carbon Project" at michigan.gov to learn more.

BAHIA'S POTATOES BRAVAS

At Bahia (pronounced ba-Hee-yah), the new Spanish-fusion spot on near the north end of Traverse City's Union Street, bringing guests together is the name of the game. The brainchild of owner Tim Keil and two-decade kitchen veteran Brian Welburn, Bahia was born in mid-July when a love of Latin cuisine sent this dining duo in search of traditional Spanish tapas. "This is the place to come enjoy each other's company," says Welburn. "That's what hospitality and dining are all about." And nothing says "togetherness" quite like a shared plate of Potatoes Bravas. A "must-try" for first-time Bahia diners, this typical tapa begins with crispy, cubed Yukon Gold potatoes. Fried to golden-brown perfection and served alongside dueling sauces — one a scratch-made truffle aioli, the other a tomato and roasted red pepper "Brava" sauce — and topped with bitter microgreens, this classic plate packs enough savory spice to have you coming back for seconds. And for $11 dollars per drool-worthy plate, why wouldn't you? Find Bahia at 127 S. Union St. (231) 421-3669, or search Bahia Traverse City on Facebook.

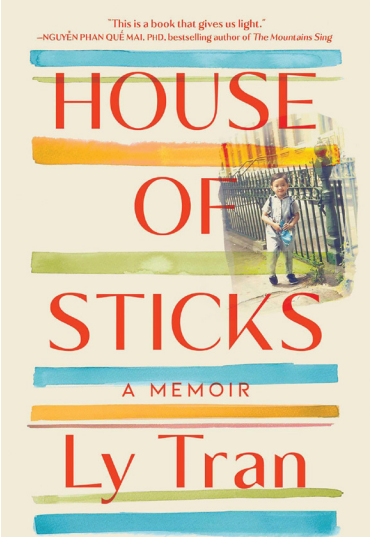

MINNEHAHA BREWHAHA MUSIC FESTIVAL IN ARCADIA SEPT. 3-4

Arcadia Marine is the home of the Minnehaha Brewhaha Music Festival, which takes place Friday and Saturday, Sept. 3-4. Vinyl Tap and Hurt Me Tommy take the stage Friday evening beginning at 6pm. There will also be a domestic beer tent and seven local food trucks. Bonus: No cover charge on Friday! The Crosscut Kings kick off Saturday's shows at 11am, followed by rockabilly with Delilah DeWylde (pictured), The New Reformation Band, Melophobix, Steppin' In It with Joshua Davis, and Cousin Curtiss. There will also be a 5K and 15K starting at 8am Saturday. Music-only tickets are $15. Music and tasting are $30 presale, $35 at the gate. Sponsored by Music Moves Me, Inc. which benefits local school districts' music programs. Tickets at mynorthtickets.com, search "Minnehaha Brewhaha."

HEY, READ IT
HOUSE OF STICKS

In her searing debut memoir, "House of Sticks," Ly Tran recalls both hurt and healing in her coming of age as a United States immigrant. Tran was just three years old in 1993 when her former POW father relocated his family from their Mekong village to a tumbledown two-bedroom flat in Queens, New York. Left with few resources and next to no money, Tran's singularly raw narration recalls a childhood framed by cultural pressure and endless years of poverty, one in which the whole family helped with household income and their work ranged from operating at-home sweatshops to owning a local nail salon. Still, Tran's story is foremost a family affair. An homage to the strength and struggle of family heritage, "House of Sticks" portrays the balancing act of forging individual paths without forgetting the way back home.

6 THREE LABOR DAY BRIDGE WALKS

You've probably heard of the annual Mackinac Bridge Walk that takes place every year on Labor Day (minus last year, for obvious reasons). The bridge closes to public traffic from 6:30am to noon so folks can walk the 5-mile stretch from St. Ignace to Mackinaw City starting at 7am. Though no registration is required, and the event is free as always, there's one key difference this year: There won't be any buses taking walkers back to the starting line; folks who walk the entire bridge must arrange their own ride back — a ride that can only happen after the bridge reopens to public traffic at noon. See www.mackinacbridge.org/events/walk for more details. If you're not game for hitching some four-wheel help, there are two other tiny Up North bridge walks available: The State Street Bridge Walk in Cheboygan, where you can line up at 11:24 and walk to Washington Park for free hot dogs, chips, and live music (Cheboygan.com) and Charlevoix's Little But Mighty Bridge Walk at the Town House Bar. Participants need only gather at the Town House at 12:30 for a 1pm walk across the drawbridge — donations to the Charlevoix Food Pantry are welcome, as are amblers of all ages. (231) 675-5993.

PUNCH IN FOR RAVEN HILL/SMITHSONIAN LABOR DAYS COLLABORATION

Just in time for Labor Day, Raven Hill Discovery Center's collaboration with the Smithsonian's Museum on Main Street (MoMS) program has unveiled Labor Days—A History of Work exhibit. In development between the national and East Jordan institutions since 2019, this labor of love delves into some stellar local history, highlighting the "who, what, where, why and how of Lake Charlevoix residents at work" but cooler yet, shows how their work fit within labor around the state and nation and traces the many changes that affected the workforce and work environments around Lake Charlevoix during the past 200 years. Labor Days opened to the public on August 14th and will remain open from 10am to 4pm daily through the end of September. Worth seeing alone or with kids, or as part of a (reservations needed) school or service group. (231) 536-3369, www.miravenhill.org

9 STUFF WE LOVE: FREE PASSES TO MICHIGAN ATTRACTIONS

The secret to keeping the spirit of summer vacation adventures alive into fall? A library card. Yours will not only whisk you away to the countless worlds waiting inside books but also nab you free passes to (real-life!) attractions all over the state. Here's how: Head to the Michigan Activity Pass website, highlight your home library, click on the kind of destinations you seek (all, kid-friendly, or ADA compliant) and any particular subjects that interest you: art, farms, nature, music, etc., and how far you're looking to travel from your zip code. A list of museums, parks, recreation areas, historic sites, and more will pop up; you select the ones you want, enter the date you plan to go, and voila! You're in. Using our Traverse Area District Library – Woodmere connection (OK, library card), we nabbed a pass for the Dennon Museum and Empire's history museum for an upcoming fall weekend, and we plan to hit the Urban Institute of Contemporary Arts in Grand Rapids, the Sea Life Aquarium in Auburn Hills, and the Wild Swan Theatre in Ann Arbor soon. See where your card will take you at www.plymouthrockets.com/michiganactivitypass/

10 BOTTOMS UP TAP 30'S BLOOD ORANGE PALOMA

As refreshing as the standard vodka soda or gin and tonic can be on a hot day, those of us who've spent this summer's welcome multitude of sizzling afternoons and evenings sucking down such clear and present Plain Janes are, well ... maybe just a wee bit bored by now. Spoiled, perhaps. But no matter. An equally uncomplicated but significantly more special thirst-quencher is being slung (slang?) from Tap 30's well-appointed bar in Petoskey, and its reliable mastery of balancing both sweet and sour against a wallop of spare but flavorful spirits — in this case, one of our favorite silver tequilas, Blue Nectar, against a dash of Solerno and lime juice, a squirt of agave, and a sparkling splash of blood orange soda. The result is a bracing and truly refreshing summer cocktail that tastes even better on the eatery's spacious greenery-encircled outdoor deck set right on Mitchell Street. Spoil yourself as long as September's temps see fit to do the same. $11. Find Tap 30 at 442 E. Mitchell St., in Petoskey. (231) 881-9572, www.tap30.com

COUNTY KNOWLEDGE AND CITY PLANS

SPECTATOR
BY STEPHEN TUTTLE

Those of us living in Grand Traverse County are incredibly lucky; the Republicans on our county board of commissioners are just about the smartest people alive, and their wisdom extends to subjects far and wide.

A previous board's expertise on energy distribution — specifically pipelines — led them to pass a resolution in support of the proposed Enbridge tunnel/pipeline under the Straits of Mackinac that would replace the pipelines now lying on the bottom of the Straits. Engineering backgrounds would have been helpful had any such experience or education existed on the board, but it did not.

Then there was the board that demonstrated its constitutional expertise with its resolution “protecting” Second Amendment rights. Opposing so-called red flag laws, some on the board said the county would expend no money to enforce such a law and discouraged law enforcement from doing so. In other words, their vast knowledge of the law and experienced in, you know ... science. Groups that have access to the most information and are the best qualified to make decisions regarding the pandemic.

Our board members who supported the resolution? Let's see... there's a general store owner, an owner of adult foster care facilities, a developer, a dance studio owner, and co-owner of a two-person small business. It would appear their expertise lies outside the realm of medicine.

The idea of “medical autonomy” is perfectly legitimate as long as the autonomous decisions being made impact only the decision-maker. But that individualized paradigm doesn't work at all amid a contagion. Our freedom from an intrusive government does not include the right to infect other people with a potentially life-threatening bug.

Michigan has surpassed one million cases and 21,000 deaths, and here in Grand Traverse the U.S. Constitution would enable them to ignore a legitimately enacted law of the sort approved by the courts in other states.

Since Michigan had and has no such laws, it was just an exercise in chest-thumping puffery by a group without a second's experience with the law.

Which brings us to the board's latest excursion into subjects about which they know nothing but pass resolutions as if they do. Now, they're medical experts.

This time their resolution, dutifully passed by the five Republicans on the board, would ban the county from mandating COVID-19 vaccines and prohibit the requirement for proof of vaccination or test results. It also requires the Grand Traverse County Health Department's vaccine messaging to include the suggestion that people should contact their physician before making any medical decision. Authored by board chair Rob Hentschel in the name of “medical autonomy,” the resolution sounds innocuous enough on the surface.

It's always a good idea to check with your personal physician before taking any new drug or vaccine as they should be the most knowledgeable about its effects, both positive and negative. (And since more than 90 percent of all practicing physicians have already received their full vaccination, their advice would likely encourage their patients to follow suit.)

But, alas, the board didn't stop there. Its resolution also ignored the recommendations of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) and Michigan's Department of Health and Human Services (MDHHS) — organizations that include actual medical experts, educated, trained, and County, we've had more than 6,800 confirmed cases and more than 100 deaths. Our county health department has enough on its hands without an intrusive and ill-informed resolution from a board that should be supportive of the yeoman work being done by that staff in extraordinarily difficult circumstances.

Meanwhile, Traverse City continues its quest to make downtown nothing more than a forest of condos and apartment buildings, with retail on the ground floor, of course. The latest, a proposal for a five-story building with “affordable” rents ranging from $800 to $2,000 per month where Parking Lot O now exists. And no place to park a car.

That seems to be the vision of the Traverse City Downtown Development Authority (DDA) and the current city commission: downtown population density at the expense of everything else. That vision seems understandable for the DDA since it has a direct financial incentive for more and more buildings, and more buildings mean more property taxes, which ultimately means more tax increment financing (TIF) and more income for the DDA.

This obsession we have with filling every available space, especially with multi-family residential projects, makes us ask some obvious questions. Where is the greenery? Where will children play? Where is any open space? Is our long-term vision a downtown full of people but without families? Have we intentionally or inadvertently planned it that way?

To paraphrase the old Heart song, we seem to be creating a downtown with nowhere to breathe easy and no place to be young.

A city recreating itself as something it's not inside a county with a board pretending to know things it does not. Sigh.

SECOND WIND

Whether leaving a dream job or enduring nightmarish job market, it's never too late to start over.

By Ross Boissoneau

Jon Zickert thought he had it made. He attended school for hospitality management, then almost immediately got a job with Marriott, eventually settling in Cleveland, Ohio with his wife.

But the Wisconsin native and his wife, originally from Reed City, wanted to be closer to friends and family.

Like others, they found themselves enthralled when they visited northern Michigan.

"Crystal Lake, Crystal Mountain, the dunes – that was where I wanted to live," Zickert says.

After running the rooms division at Crystal Mountain for 12 years, restructuring led to a job loss, which forced him to decide how to best use the customer service skills he'd developed.

"When I had to make the change, my wife was a teacher at Benzie Central. I said, 'You like it (here)? I love it. We'll figure it out,'" he says. "I had to figure out what my new passion would be."

Today Zickert is one of the top-selling agents for Real Estate One in Benzie County, a move that was not unusual for many in his field, he says.

"A lot of my Marriott management friends went into real estate," he says. "You're doing a lot of different things and not tied to a desk. In hindsight it was the best thing that could have happened."

Zickert says he enjoys the variety each day brings.

"It's different every day. I talk to at least one new person every day," he says. "I fell in love with the business."

Zickert is not alone in his discovery that it's never too late to start over.

From IPR broadcaster to Methodist minister

Traverse City native Linda Stephan says she was "beyond" happy at Interlochen Public Radio.

"I was working at my dream job," Stephan says. "I came to my hometown to an incredibly well-run radio station. It was a brilliant place to land."

As a reporter and host for the "All Things Considered" broadcast, Stephan enjoyed the range of skills she needed to run the

"I wanted to be available to people and realized I was useful in spaces like that," Stephan says.

That launched her into a major life change. In 2015, she left her dream job and went to seminary in Atlanta. Less than two months ago, she was transferred from a Methodist church out of state back to her hometown.

Stephan is now associate pastor at Central United Methodist Church, working with numerous departments and co-leading the

"I never saw myself in northern Michigan slinging wine." – Gabe Marzonie, director of marketing, Leelanau Cellars technology and programming side.

"I did a lot of different things, behind the scenes in tech and programming," she says. "I was the interim GM – but we didn't have a GM. I was hoping to never have to leave."

Then life threw her a curve. "A million things happened all at once," she says.

Chief among them was a childhood friend was killed in a motorcycle accident. Her friend was an organ donor, and when she went to visit the family in the hospital, they asked her to stay and pray with them during the final surgery.

worship services with Pastor Chris Lane. She also gets to work with former Interlochen colleagues Tom Bara and Michael Coonrod.

"The whole experience, there have been so many encouragers who never expected me to make this change, from parents and former co-workers," says Stephan. "I just have to say thank you to the bishop (who transferred her.)"

'Slinging wine in northern Michigan'

For Gabe Marzonie, the change wasn't so much in what he was doing. It's where and who he was doing it for.

Marzonie spent 10 years working in Washington, D.C. as a speechwriter and also working in marketing for the Department of Homeland Security, which took different approach to press releases after 9/11, he says.

"After 9/11, if you're going to talk to the public, you can't do it in a press release," he says. "Public relations tells people what's happening; marketing changes behavior."

One of the first and most visible results was the now-ubiquitous maxim, "If you see something, say something."

"That was mine," he says proudly. "My team launched that."

The Flushing native had vowed never to return to his home state, and even marrying a fellow Michigander hadn't changed his mind.

Then came a visit to his wife's parents, who had retired to Traverse City.

"I saw the water for the first time," he says. "It was a perfect day, the water was teal – like the Caribbean, not the Michigan I know."

These days, he gets to see the water every day when he drives from his home on Old Mission Peninsula to work at Leelanau Cellars in Omena, where he is director of marketing.

"I never saw myself in northern Michigan slinging wine," he says about his work at the 55th largest winery in the U.S.

Though he says he's changed commodities, the same approach he developed at Homeland Security applies.

"I'm still changing minds," he says. "We've gone from being available in five states to 27 in three years."

And even though he never wanted to come back, it appears that now he never wants to leave his home state.

"I love it," he says.

Healing begins with us.

NEEDLES, BLOOD, AND THE WANTON DESTRUCTION OF INFRASTRUCTURE

GUEST OPINION
BY GARY HOWE

When I watch movies, I squirm when needles go into skin and when blood oozes all over the place. These seem like pretty common reactions among moviegoers, but I wonder how many other people also have to avert their eyes when bridges, streets, and buildings are destroyed? When Godzilla and King Kong took their dispute to Hong Kong in GODZILLA VS KONG, I tensed up in my seat and could barely watch.

Hong Kong will never recover from this! I thought. That one bridge alone costs billions, and they just destroyed three bridges, plus the adjacent buildings.” It’s worse than watching American Horror Story.

commercial buildings, in addition to public infrastructure. Rebuilding Haiti, again, will cost untold billions. Where will the money come from? It takes economic growth — or debt — to build communities.

All of this runs through my head when I watch monster movies and superhero films. Unfortunately for my movie-going experience, it can all be too much. Recently, with infrastructure week turning into infrastructure months on the national scene, I’ve had to watch the news from between my fingers, too. I’m concerned about how we’ll pay to maintain and grow the places we call home. I worry about their overall economic

I WILL HOLD OUT HOPE. PERHAPS CONGRESS WILL DEVELOP A FINAL PLAN THAT WILL FUND
TRANSIT AND RAIL, RETROFIT OUR COMMUNITIES
FOR FUTURE CLIMATE CHALLENGES, AND PREPARE US FOR THE NEXT 100 YEARS.

Witnessing my unease with all things needles, blood, and destruction, my moving-going partner, in a predictable fashion, will remind me, “It’s only a movie. It’s not real.” So I take a deep breath and try to enjoy the show. Popcorn helps.

However, I’m still concerned. The gouging we take for a bucket of popcorn at the theaters is nothing compared to the actual cost of building towns and cities, both the private and public expenditures. A modest building in a global city like Hong Kong can easily cost $100 million, and more likely, it will be more. How many multi-million investments did Kong crush simply by hurling himself around for momentum? Does insurance cover epic titan battles?

Then there’s the streets and bridges. I’m not sure which actual bridges Godzilla pulverized to bits during the smash fest, but the Lai Chi Kok Bridge, built in 1968, would cost a minimum of $15 billion to replace today. During the film, I lost track of the number of similar overpasses and pedestrian walkways that suddenly met the end of their useful life. The destruction comes swiftly and devastatingly. Smash. Crush. The horror and the humor.

In purely economic terms, the epic titan battle would have put Hong Kong in a staggering trillion-dollar hole, and that’s not even counting the cost of a few thousand people becoming instantly homeless and jobless. But, of course, Hong Kong is a wealthy city with a GDP of $370 million, and perhaps it could rebound. But what about cities in poorer countries?

Haiti has been the site of multiple epic events, the latest of which happened on 14 August, when a magnitude 7.2 earthquake hit the Tiburon Peninsula. Over 70,000 homes were destroyed. The nation was still reeling from the 2010 earthquake, which destroyed a quarter-million homes and over 30,000 stability, whether it’s Kong’s fictional Hong Kong or my own, and all too real, country, state, and hometown.

Looking between my fingers at the American Jobs Plan currently being debated in Congress, I understand two worrisome things. One, Congress isn’t adequately planning for a titan clash in one of our major cities, let alone for the destruction that we know climate change is bringing. And two, the plan continues to throw too much borrowed money at new liabilities instead of fixing the streets and bridges we already have.

New streets are like new cars: they are worth less the minute you drive them off the lot. Yet, the American Jobs Plan calls for new roads and bridges. Locally, we have a new bridge proposal that many people hope will be paid for through the Plan’s passage. But how will we pay to maintain it over its lifespan and replace it when it reaches the end of its life? A $50 million investment in a new bridge will need to generate at least that much in additional tax revenue over its lifespan, and that will require economic growth. And if a giant titan tortoise emerges from the depths of Boardman Lake and destroys it sooner, then we’re really in trouble.

I will hold out hope. Perhaps Congress will develop a final plan that will fund transit and rail, retrofit our communities for future climate challenges, and prepare us for the next 100 years. But, of course, I understand that the spending bill can only be as good as bipartisanship allows. Still, it’s tough to watch, and I find myself squirming in my chair as I scroll through my feed. If only it were just a movie.

Gary Howe lives in Traverse City, Michigan, and hopes mega monsters don’t pop up from the depths of West Bay — he couldn’t bear to watch it.

NEWS OF THE

WEIRD

Inexplicable

Metro News reported on Aug. 15 that authorities in the village of Womersley in Surrey, England, are stumped by a serial baked bean bandit who is pouring the savory legumes on doorsteps, cars and into mail slots. Officers have promised to step up patrols in the area, but residents are seeing the lighter side: "What half-baked idiots would do this? I hope they get thrown in the can!" and "Absolutely Heinous crime."

Repeat Offender

A Davenport, Iowa, man was arrested on Aug. 12 after nonchalantly entering a home and rummaging for children's dirty underwear, then sitting down next to a juvenile on the couch. The Quad-City Times reported that Brock Joseph Beert, 30, was led out the back door and waited for police while sitting on a fence. Beert was charged with second-degree burglary and will face the court for those charges after a sentencing hearing on Aug. 19 for another burglary earlier this year.

Fine Points of the Law

Paul Flores, 44, of San Pedro, California, is facing the court for the 1996 disappearance and murder of Kristin Smart, Yahoo News reported. On Aug. 11, Bob Sanger, Flores' attorney, filed a motion requesting a hearing to recuse the entire district attorney's office. Sanger argued that prosecutors have a conflict of interest because they've been wearing purple clothing during the hearing, which was Smart's favorite color. He also said the victim witness coordinator has been sending a "prejudicial message" to witnesses that the DA's office is on Smart's side. Specifically, Sanger said, Detective Clint Cole had worn a purple tie every day of the hearing. Sanger's motion will be heard on Aug. 25.

Bright Idea

New York City subway motorman Terrell Harris is in trouble with the Metropolitan Transportation Authority after letting his girlfriend take a train for a joyride on Aug. 13. According to NBC New York, the couple posted photos to social media showing them in the cab, with her operating the controls through several stops. Interim NYC Transit President Craig Cipriano called the incident an "egregious violation of public trust. Something that I haven't seen in my 32 years here." Harris has been "taken out of service."

Puppy Le Pew

A Nylabone dog treat plant in Neptune City, New Jersey, has neighbors holding their noses after the company consolidated its manufacturing at the site recently. "It's nauseating," Linda Williamson, who lives nearby, told NBC New York. "Instant headaches." Nylabone President Glen Axelrod said the company has spent more than $2 million on odor abatement, charcoal filters and other fixes. "If it were a bakery, you'd be smelling baked food; if we were a steakhouse, you'd be smelling steak," he said. But ... it's not. "You can't enjoy your own yard in this beautiful neighborhood," complained Linda Colucci. While neighbors consult with lawyers about their next moves, Axelrod said the company will continue to explore solutions to the noxious odors.

Rubbish

In Bathside, Harwich, England, resident

Irene Slater, 59, has been "gobsmacked" by the theft of garbage bags from outside her home -- four times! She keeps the full bags outside because of the smell, but someone obviously appreciates the bouquet, according to the Harwich and Manningtree Standard, sneaking up in the dark of night to take them away. Slater and her neighbors are concerned that the thieves are looking to steal their identities. "It's just so strange -- why would you steal a bin bag?" Slater asked. "It's certainly not as bad as being burgled, but it still makes you think."

Freddie Gillium-Webb, 29, from Hampshire, England, was tasked in August with a cleaning job he won't soon forget, the Daily Mail reported. After a tenant was removed for not paying rent, Gillium-Webb went in to clean the apartment and found a pile of approximately 8,000 beer cans several feet deep, but that wasn't the worst of it. "The smell was terrible. The kitchen was full of food waste and in the living room there were half-eaten kebabs and moldy loaves of bread all over the floor," Gillium-Webb said. "The toilet was piled high with toilet paper and feces, it was disgusting. He'd never flushed it by the looks of it." He said he vomited three times during the cleanup and used 100 large trash bags and 10 bottles of bleach. Still, Gillium-Webb was empathetic: "The tenant might have had depression and he probably had a drinking problem, based on the amount of cans. You need help sometimes, but you can't live like that."

That Was Fast

Steven James Jordan, 31, launched a Twitter account on Aug. 8 and tweeted 186 times within three hours. His account was suspended on Aug. 9, and by Aug. 12, Law & Crime reported, Jordan was booked into the Pinellas County (Florida) jail for threatening tweets. Sheriff's spokesperson Deputy Amanda Sinni said Jordan targeted Activision Games in reference to video games and said he was going to blow up Disney executives' homes, even tagging the company in the tweets. Jordan admitted to writing the tweets but said he posted "stupid things" and didn't want to be arrested. He has a previous conviction for threatening to open fire at a Masonic lodge in Clearwater, Florida.

Suspicious Confirmed

In January, Demetra Street of Baltimore attended a memorial service for her husband, Ivan, complete with a photo of him next to an urn at the front of the room at Wylie Funeral Homes. But after the service, funeral home personnel whisked the urn away and wouldn't turn over Ivan's ashes, she told The Washington Post. Now she thinks she knows why: Ivan's ashes weren't in the urn. Instead, his body had been buried three days earlier, according to the wishes of another woman who claimed to be Ivan's wife, at Baltimore's Mount Zion cemetery. In early August, Street filed a lawsuit against the funeral home for $8.5 million, calling the urn displayed at the memorial service a "sham." The funeral home's president, Brandon Wylie, denies the accusation: "We vehemently deny the claims advanced by Ms. Street and assert that the underlying matter was handled with the utmost sensitivity toward the loved ones of the deceased."

We CARE.

DOG WALKER

ROVER

Manistee

Not a fan of human interaction? Love dogs? Looking for part-time work with little to no stress, lots of fresh air, and flexible hours? Rover.com, the largest provider of "5-star" pet sitters and walkers in the nation, is looking for a dog walker in Manistee. For a cool average of $15 per hour, all you'd have to do (or is that get to do?) is take your furry charge for a 30-minute or 1-hour walk at a frequency you agree to, feed and play with said furball, and ensure his or her water bowl is full when returning him or her home. Sound too good to be true? Well, you will have to pick up and dispose of the pup's poop while on your walk, so it's not all wagging tails and roses. Nevertheless, it's an ideal job for a pet lover, and there's more dough to be made if you sign on as an overnight pet sitter in your home or — ideal for work-from-home folks hungry for quiet companionship — as a doggy daycare provider. The ideal candidate is a dog owner (or one who has extensive experience with dogs). Rover requires applicants to be over 18 years old and pass an enhanced background check; some might need to follow an ongoing pet care education course and pass the Rover walker certification. It's worth it though: You can set your own rates, and all payments go through the Rover platform, so you never have to collect directly from or, er ... hound your clients. Cat sitters can apply, too. Search "Manistee" at Salarship.com or find other openings around the North at Rover.com.

The fleet of Melges 24 heads upwind.
(U.S. Melges 24 Class Association)

A growing fleet of Melges 24 boats – one of the biggest in the country – attracts sailors of all stripes.

By Todd VanSickle

On Wednesday nights, the waters of West Grand Traverse Bay churn with Grand Traverse Yacht Club teams racing for inter-club glory.

The eye-catching boats – a fleet of 14 Melges 24s – are known for their easy set-up and high performance on both inland lakes and big open water.

The fleet has attracted professional sailors and enticed younger sailors to jump onboard these weekly races, held every Wednesday from June-September.

According to Melges 24 Fleet Captain Scot Zimmerman, the fleet began when some sailors at the Grand Traverse Yacht Club noticed how competitive the sailboat was.

It wasn't long and a couple of the members bought a Melges and started racing.

"The fun and excitement I think just bred broader and broader participation," Zimmerman says.

Mike Dow described himself as one of the "original" Melges boat owners. The boats have numbers on their bows that help the race committee identify the boat. His boat, Flying Toaster, is number 613.

Around 1994 according to Dow, Mike Fisher and Steve Trippe had the first Melges 24s in town.

"Of course, we all took rides on it," Dow says.

Two years later Dow bought his own boat and has gone on to become one of the top sailors in the fleet, even winning the recent Melges 24 Grand Traverse Invitational.

Over the years, the Melges fleet, which sails out of the Grand Traverse Yacht Club, has fluctuated in size. But thanks to a healthy used boat market a couple years ago, Dow and Zimmerman say that the fleet has grown.

"There were used boats available at a reasonable price," Zimmerman says. "And you can take that used boat and immediately be competitive in this really high-caliber class. The entry point was really good."

Nowadays, it's hard to find a used Melges, he says.

"Today, there are very, very few used boats available," he says. "The market has completely dried up because of the resurgence of the class."

A used Melges 24 can run anywhere from $20,000 to $70,000.

GTYC's fleet sits at 14 boats that sail regularly on Wednesday nights in the summer, making it one of the largest standing weekly fleets in the country, according to Zimmerman. All told, there are only about 860 Melges boats in the world, he added.

Dow says one of the appeals of the Melges is that it is a one-design boat, which does not require handicapping when being scored.

"It's a very light boat with a lot of sail area — sports car like," Dow says. "Going fast is fun. That's a big part of it."

Another appeal of the boat is its versatility. The Melges can be sailed on inland lakes and the open ocean.

"It's a good all-around boat," Zimmerman says. "But I think there's a really strong racing culture that's always been present here and I think it's really growing at the moment."

The Melges is sailed by a crew of three to five. It was built in the early 1990s by the Melges Boat Works company, owned by America's Cup sailor Harry "Buddy" Melges.

"It became one of the most popular

one-design sport boats in the world," Zimmerman says.

The GTYC has hosted sailboat racing for all classes on Wednesday nights for decades, according to Zimmerman. The one-design Melges has been a welcomed addition, he added.

On a recent August Wednesday evening, about two dozen spectators watched from shore enjoying oysters and cocktails on a small patch of grass in front of GTYC. On the horizon, a line of Melges 24s sailed downwind with brightly colored spinnakers pulling them to the finish line.

Much of the Melges fleet is kept at the clubhouse that sits on West Bay. After racing, the boats return to the clubhouse where they are hauled out and sailors swap sailing stories over drinks.

Getting a large fleet like the GTYC's

Melges on the water each week can be a challenge, Zimmerman says. As many as 70 sailors can be needed but getting them all on board isn't always possible.

"There's always crew problems or someone gets sick or they've got work. And so, what happens is there's generally a need for fill-in crew," Zimmerman says.

Sometimes, the fill-in crew can be racing royalty that happens to be visiting the area, he says.

"And, lately, some of our fill-in crew have been Olympic gold medal sailors and Volvo Ocean Race sailors," he says. "Some world-class sailors that happen to be in the area and want to come sail with us. It's kind of amazing."

In spite of the occasional drop-in superstar sailor, Zimmerman described the Melges 24 class as a "grass-roots kind of fleet," with a diverse group of sailors, both young and old.

The Melges 24 fleet is dry docked at the Grand Traverse Yacht Club after competing on a Wednesday night. (Photo: Todd VanSickle)

"Often times the fleets are very heavily male," he says. "And we have a significant female presence in the fleet with many boats that sail with a couple of women, which hasn't historically been normal."

Zimmerman sails with two females — his wife Liz and daughter Katy — onboard the family's boat, Bad Idea.

"It is unusual to have married people on board a boat," Liz Zimmerman says, who grew up in Leland and learned to sail from a young age. "What is different about this fleet is that we have women on almost every boat and in critical roles. Katy trims our spinnaker, which is very unique in the fleet. It is a very physical boat."

Liz met her husband while attending high school at Traverse City Central, but didn't start dating until college.

"His mom had boats, so we sailed a lot the first couple years of dating — not racing, just for fun," she says, whose dad was a member at GTYC.

Liz stood on the dock as boats were being hauled out on a recent Wednesday sailing night. It was the last sailing session before competing in the Melges 24 Grand Traverse Invitational. Her daughter was unable to make the Wednesday night sail due to prior engagements.

"Wednesday nights are a warm-up for bigger events," Liz says. "It is also an opportunity to practice and learn routines."

Every year the class hosts a national event here in the U.S., and then a world championship is hosted every year, moving from Asia to Europe to the U.S. on a multi-year cycle.

On August 21-22, the Melges 24 Grand Traverse Invitational was hosted by the GTYC with 21 boats competing. It was the seventh stop on the ranking series. GTYC sailors took several top spots, including Dow in first place and Zimmerman in third. Fred Rozelle took second place, Kent Sisk was in fifth and Steve Pirie came in fourth.

"We had a great regatta," Dow says. "The team sailed well together, and we made minimal mistakes. Gregg Diehl was on bow, Jamie Olsen was in the middle and Bob Clark trimming."

The sailors will now compete at the 2021 U.S. Melges 24 National Championship on September 15-19 hosted by the Crescent Sail Yacht Club in Grosse Pointe Farms, Michigan.

Peyton Diehl hasn't missed a Wednesday night sail all summer. Last year, she started sailing more seriously on GTYC Commodore Bill Babel's Melges 24 Blue, Red and Grey — named after The Who song. She was unsure how they finished on Wednesday night, but the boat came in 19th in the following weekend's Melges 24 Grand Traverse Invitational.

"We are super fun crew," Diehl says, who sails competitively for Hope College on a 420. "We like to win, but it is never super tense. We just have good times out there."

Diehl likes sailing with a bigger crew on the Melges, opposed to the two-man 420 boat she sails at college. Ultimately, she has become a better sailor after competing on the Melges, she says.

"It is fast-paced," Diehl says, whose roles range from "rail meat" to trimming the spinnaker on the boat. "It is a lot more complicated. We switch around and learn new things."

The last Wednesday sailing night will be held September 26.

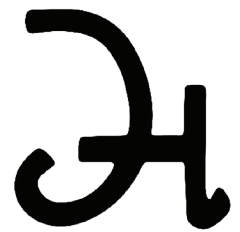

Scot Zimmerman says he is optimistic about the growth of the Melges 24 fleet and points to youth programs, like Traverse Area Community Sailing and local high school teams. He also says Wednesday night sailing will only help the development and longevity of the sport.

"I think we go out, we're really competitive and it's a lot of fun," he says. "I think people go, 'Gosh, why wouldn't I go jump on that boat for an hour or two with some people that are just out there having a lot of fun.'"

CLIMBING WALL, EATERIES OPEN IN TC, KINGSLEY, ELK RAPIDS

By Beth Milligan

A long-awaited diner has opened its doors in Kingsley, the region's only indoor rock climbing gym launched this week in Traverse City, and numerous other businesses are on the move in our latest look at local openings, closings, and expansions.

J. Wall Diner

A new restaurant that's been in the works for at least a year has opened its doors in downtown Kingsley. Chris and Rebecca Roehler – owners of Rolling Farms Café in Traverse City and Judson Market & Restaurant in Kingsley – have launched J. Wall Diner in the former Whirly's space at 413 Main Street. General Manager Brandon Stevens, who worked for the Roehlers in the past, relocated his family back to the area from Saginaw to help open the new restaurant.

Stevens says J. Wall Diner offers breakfast all day – with current hours of Monday-Friday 8am-5pm – with all “scratch-made” food items, from handmade biscuits to hand-shredded hash browns. “We have sandwiches, salads, burgers, chicken, chili...and we're planning on running daily specials from tamales to perogies to stroganoff,” he says.

“We'll have a different scratch-made soup every day all winter.” The diner also grinds its own coffee beans and has a variety of hot and cold coffee drinks, including espresso, lattes, and cappuccinos. The addition of a coffee and breakfast spot in Kingsley – along with a brewery, with Workshop Brewing Company recently announcing plans to open a Kingsley location – fulfill two long-time items on the top of the village's wish list for downtown.

Like most restaurants in the region, J. Wall Diner is working to attract more staff: Stevens says he's working long hours short-handed to get the diner off the ground and has hired a handful of “awesome high school staff servers” to give local students a chance to earn extra side money. With more employees, the diner could expand its hours – Stevens hopes to operate at least Monday-Saturday from 8am-8pm – and operations going forward. “We have seating for 80-100, and we plan on putting out some outdoor tables next spring,” he says, adding the menu could also be tweaked based on guest feedback. “We're just getting started and getting the word out.”

Elev8

The region's only dedicated indoor rock climbing gym opened its doors Wednesday near downtown Traverse City. Kevin Vlach and Nick Olson, both Traverse City natives, have been working since last fall to build the new 10,000 square-foot Elev8 facility from the ground up at 510 Barlow Street between Brick Wheels and McLain Cycle & Fitness near Eighth Street. The gym has a 40-foot climbing wall, bouldering areas, aerobic and weight equipment, yoga and fitness classes, and on-site child care. Elev8 is designed to accommodate a range of skillsets and ages, from those brand new to the sport to experienced climbers. Instructional classes and rental equipment are available for newbies looking to test out climbing.

Olson says the facility is launching with approximately a dozen staff and 13 yoga/fitness instructors. Elev8 offered a pre-opening “founding members” package that quickly sold out at 150 members. A range of access options are now available, from monthly all-inclusive memberships and day passes to first-timer passes and youth rates. Two dollars a month from every membership sold will go into an Elev8 scholarship fund to make gym access available to those who can't afford it. Elev8 is open Monday-Friday 10am-9pm, Saturday 11am-8pm, and Sunday 12pm-6pm, with special member-only hours offered Monday/Wednesday/Friday 7am-10am and Sunday 10am-12pm.

More openings, closings, and moves across the region...

A new chocolate shop has opened its doors in Traverse City. Dave and Shana Sicotte launched “bean-to-bar craft chocolate” store Great Lakes Chocolate & Dessert Company at 819 South Garfield Avenue next to HoneyBaked Ham and Pedego. The company sources organic cacao beans from companies with direct trade purchasing practices to make chocolate bars, hand-rolled truffles, and other specialty desserts. Store hours are Thursday-Monday 11am-7pm (closed Tuesday-Wednesday).

Located a few doors down from the chocolate shop in the same Garfield Avenue plaza, Jacob Stokes and Brent Kruscke have opened hobby store Lantern Games. The shop offers a “welcoming place for people to come shop, play, learn, and create” tabletop games, trading card games, board games, role-playing games, and more. Store hours are Sunday-Friday 12pm-8pm and Saturday 10am-8pm.

Brooklyn's Pepperoni Rolls, which launched as a delivery-only business in Traverse City this spring before moving to an incubator kitchen in Oleson's Plaza East, is once again expanding. Mother-daughter duo Megan Hall and Brooklyn Hall are opening a new brick-and-mortar location in Logan's Landing on South Airport Road next to Panda North. The pair plan to leave their Hammond Road kitchen space at the end of August and open by mid-September in their new location with a few on-site dining tables and an expanded menu, offering Chicago-style stuffed deep dish pizza, salads, cheese bread, and to-go beverages along with their namesake pepperoni rolls.

New yoga and wellness studio Dharamsala TC has opened its doors at 869 Robinwood Court in Traverse City. The women-owned and operated studio founded by Kay Eppe and Cathy Fitzgerald is designed as a “sacred space for everyone to feel welcome,” allowing clients to “share yoga, mindfulness, and healthy living” through a variety of daily classes and trainings offered for all ages and abilities. Individual drop-in classes, five and 10-class packs, and monthly and annual unlimited memberships are available, along with private group sessions.

The former Southside Hideout property on Wexford Avenue in Buckley has been converted into a new event center called Stoneridge Barn. The newly renovated 6,598 square-foot building with a “modern farmhouse feel” – including a galvanized steel bar and string-lit patio with outdoor bar – can accommodate up to 200 people indoors and another 150 people on the patio. The company has begun booking events this summer, with availability for weddings, graduations, holiday parties, baby and bridal showers, and more.

Business partners Broc Crandall and Zach Hite have launched a northern Michigan local grocery delivery service called Stocked, which allows people to make grocery lists online and have goods delivered to their homes, vacation rentals, boat slips, or camping sites. Stocked is running a donation special this week (August 23-27) in partnership with Food Rescue Northwest Michigan in which the company will pick up Food Rescue donations from local homes and businesses – no order needed, though donations can also be picked up from customers at the time of delivery – and will also donate the delivery fee from orders to Food Rescue when customers use the code ‘DONATE’ at checkout. Stocked is also donating a personal care item to Food Rescue for each order placed. “Every three months we do this,” says Crandall, noting the company donated 678 pounds of products its last go-round. “We are trying to get over 1,000 pounds for the upcoming donation.”

Elk Rapids Marina is offering food and beverage options this summer with the addition of The Dam Food Truck to its property, overseen by former Rowe Inn executive chef Ethan Habasco. The truck offers a full-service coffee bar (including espresso drinks); a morning menu with breakfast burritos and sandwiches, hash browns, and French Toast sticks; and a lunch/dinner menu with wraps, pulled pork sandwiches, fries, and broasted chicken strip baskets. Pastries, coffee, and grab-and-go cold food are also available nearby in The Dam Shop. Food truck hours are Thursday-Monday 8am-8pm (closed Tuesday-Wednesday).

Lavender on Old Mission Peninsula has opened a brick-and-mortar store at 2150 Caarroll Road. The shop offers a variety of products featuring lavender grown on Old Mission by owner Amy Parker, including mists, essential oils, soaps, bath salts and fizzes, dryer balls, fruit preserves, cocktail mixes, bouquets, and more. The store is open Wednesday-Saturday 11am-6pm and Sunday 11am-4pm.

Mr C's Pub and Grill has permanently closed its doors on M-72 in Williamsburg. The restaurant posted on Facebook Tuesday that it was ceasing operations “due to the current shortage in labor.” The company added: “We are so grateful for all the amazing relationships we have made with so many of you and will miss seeing all of you.”

Finally, several businesses previously reported on by The Ticker have now officially opened or reopened their doors. Artisan, the new waterfront restaurant from Delamar Traverse City at 615 East Front Street, is now open for lunch and dinner Wednesday-Monday. The “chef-driven, farm-to-table restaurant” features both an indoor tavern dining room and an outside bar area and waterfront dining terrace. Spanish-Latin fusion and tapas restaurant Bahia opened its doors earlier this month on Union Street, while vegan café Zest Plant-Based Kitchen is now operating on East Front Street. On West Front Street, cocktail lounge 123 Speakeasy – which has been closed since the start of the pandemic – is reopening September 10 for Friday and Saturday night service. Limited reservations are being accepted now for the bar's first two weekends back in operation.

REMINISCENCE

Reminiscence is a sci-fi tinged neo-noir. The most interesting elements of the futuristic dystopia it depicts however are drowned out by a romance that – despite the mutual hotness of the paramours – simply doesn't hold water.

Hugh Jackman stars as Nick Bannister, styled like a grizzled, regretful private investigator of yore. But get this: He isn't just some regular PI – he's a PI of the mind. Yes, in this not-so-distant future, somehow Jackman's character seems to be the sole proprietor of a machine that projects people's memories for viewing while also allowing the person relive these moments like a virtual reality experience. And given the current state of affairs in the film's world, people have plenty of good reasons to want to escape to these nostalgic pleasure trips.

Set in a Miami where most of the city is now under water due to the effects of climate change, only the extremely wealthy can afford to live on dry land, walled off in elite enclaves separated by massive dams. It's also too hot during the day, so society has switched to existing at night. Plus, there are other intriguing mentions of dystopian fodder like the unexplained border wars Nick is a veteran of.

Director Lisa Joy (Westworld) has constructed a fascinating world, but it is mere set dressing for a tired psychosexual love story of obsession as Rebecca Ferguson's mysterious Mae walks into Nick's life and turns it upside down. After she suddenly disappears, he's haunted by her memory, but the film is haunted by the ghosts of the better movies it is reminiscent of.

Reminiscence is basically Minority Report in reverse, or a Waterworld-themed version of Blade Runner. Even just watching the film's trailer, I thought the film looked like a rip-off of Inception, and that was BEFORE I found out the director is Christopher Nolan's sister-in-law.

This is noir 101. Ferguson's Mae is a femme fatale writ large, a nightclub singer (like that's still even an actual job) who sings old Rogers and Hart torch songs in a slinky red dress and is clearly not who she appears to be. But after only a rather brief relationship, she is all Nick can think about, even breaking the number one rule of being a PI of the mind and using his memory machine. Somehow the pairing of Ferguson and Jackman lacks even the spark they had together in the PG-rated The Greatest Showman.

Perhaps it is because Jackman's character is forced to deliver such a hackneyed narration that even Bogart would sound ridiculous. I mean we're talking such nuggets of philosophizing silliness like, "Memory is the boat that sails against its current," or better yet, "Memories are like perfume. Better in small doses." And this narration is a near-constant fixture of the story telling, explaining every little thing, yet somehow also making no sense of the convoluted plot.

In addition to Mae's disappearance, we have Nick consulting with the district attorney on the impending trial of a land baron (Brett Cullen), whose mistress and scheming son are also swirling in Nick's orbit. And so Nick's search leads us deep into the criminal underbelly of Miami. There are actually some pretty decent action scenes, featuring stellar combat choreography, but you might not be exactly sure how the drug czar and crooked cop Nick fights with relate to the mystery other than being the easiest and most reliable tropes.

The quality of the action set pieces also speaks to just how polished the film is. Stylish and slick, it is very expensive-looking. Someone put up some serious money to produce this; there is high level of craftsmanship behind the picture. It's like they felt the need to bring the plot to a certain level of complexity to match the visuals, only to leave the audience to discover that most of what you see in the film is a distraction. Turns out the story was never as complex as it tried to seem despite dragging in mentions of the ancient legend of Orpheus and Eurydice as though it would give the film some kind of added metaphorical significance.

Reminiscence is built upon some incredibly compelling themes, especially when it comes the nature of memory and the drug-like appeal of nostalgia. But the film squanders these opportunities to have anything remotely interesting to say beyond Jackman's painfully poetic insights ("The past can haunt a man. That's what they say.")

It is safe to say for the viewer, however, that seeing this film is definitely not a memory you will want to revisit.

ASTROLOGY

AUG 30 – SEPT 05
BY ROB BREZSNY

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): “I often wonder who I am and where is my country and where do I belong and why was I ever born at all,” wrote Virgo author Jean Rhys (1890–1979). I don’t think you will be agitated by those questions during the next eight weeks, Virgo. In fact, I suspect you will feel as secure in your identity as you have in a long time. You will enjoy prolonged clarity about your role in the world, the nature of your desires, and how you should plan your life for the next two years. If for some inexplicable reason you’re not already enjoying these developments, stop what you’re doing and meditate on the probability that I am telling you the bold truth.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Everyone dreams at least three dreams per night. In a year, your subconscious mind generates over 1,100 dreams. About this remarkable fact, novelist Mila Kundera writes, “Dreaming is not merely an act of coded communication. It is also an aesthetic activity, a game that is a value in itself. To dream about things that have not happened is among humanity’s deepest needs.” I bring this to your attention, Scorpio, because September is Honor Your Dreams Month. To celebrate, I suggest the following experiments. 1. Every night before sleep, write down a question you’d like your dreams to respond to. 2. Keep a notebook by your bed and transcribe at least one dream each time you sleep. 3. In the morning, have fun imagining what the previous night’s dreams might be trying to communicate to you. 4. Say prayers of gratitude to your dreams, thanking them for their provocative, entertaining stories.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): In her autobiography Changing, Sagittarian actor Liv Ullmann expresses grief about how she and a loved one failed to communicate essential truths to each other. I propose we regard her as your anti-role model for the rest of 2021. Use her error as your inspiration. Make emotionally intelligent efforts to talk about unsaid things that linger like ghostly puzzles between you and those you care about.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): “I could do with a bit more excess,” writes author Joanne Harris. “From now on I’m going to be immoderate—and volatile,” she vows. “I shall enjoy loud music and lurid poetry. I shall be rampant.” Let me be clear, Capricorn: I’m not urging you to be immoderate, volatile, excessive, and rampant every day for the rest of your long life. But I think you will generate health benefits and good fortune if you experiment with that approach in the coming weeks. Can you think of relatively sane, sensible ways to give yourself this salubrious luxury?

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): While wading through the internet’s wilder terrain, I found a provocative quote alleged to have been uttered by the ancient Greek philosopher Socrates. He supposedly said, “My ultimate goal is to look totally hot, but not be unapproachable.” I confess that in the past I have sometimes been fooled by fake quotes, and I suspect this is one. Still, it’s amusing to entertain the possibility that such an august personage as Socrates, a major influencer of Western culture, might say something so cute and colloquial. Even if he didn’t actually say it, I like the idea of blending ancient wisdom with modern insights, seriousness with silliness, thoughtful analysis with good fun. In accordance with astrological omens, I recommend you experiment with comparable hybrids in the coming weeks. (PS: One of your goals should be to look totally hot, but not be unapproachable.)

PISCES (Feb 19-March 20): “If you don’t know what you want,” writes Piscean novelist Chuck Palahniuk, “you end up with a lot you don’t.” Very true! And right now, it’s extra important to keep that in mind. During the coming weeks, you’ll be at the peak of your ability to attract what you want and need. Wouldn’t you prefer to gather influences you really desire—as opposed to those for which you have mild or zero interest? Define your wants and needs very precisely.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Aries poet Anna Kamienska wrote, “I’ve learned to value failed conversations, missed connections, confusions. What remains is what’s unsaid, what’s underneath. Understanding on another level of being.” In the coming weeks, I suggest you adopt her perspective as you evaluate both past and present experiences. You’re likely to find small treasures in what you’d assumed were wastelands. You may uncover inspiring clues in plot twists that initially frustrated you. Upon further examination, interludes you dismissed as unimportant or uninteresting could reveal valuable wrinkles.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): After studying your astrological omens, I’ve decided to offer you inspiration from the ancient Roman poet Catullus. I hope the extravagant spirit of his words will free you to be greedy for the delights of love and affection. Catullus wrote, “Give me a thousand kisses, then a hundred; then another thousand, then a second hundred; then yet another thousand.” I’ll add the following to Catullus’s appeal: Seek an abundance of endearing words, sweet favors and gifts, caresses and massages, help with your work, and fabulous orgasms. If there’s no one in your life to provide you with such blessings, give them to yourself.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Gemini author Elif Batuman writes that the Old Uzbek language was rich in expressions about crying. There were “words for wanting to cry and not being able to, for loudly crying like thunder in the clouds, for crying in gasps, for weeping inwardly or secretly, for crying ceaselessly in a high voice, for crying in hiccups, and for crying while uttering the sound ‘hay hay.’” I recommend all of these to you in the coming days, as well as others you might dream up. Why? It’s prime time to seek the invigorating release and renewal that come from shedding tears generated by deep and mysterious feelings.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A blogger named MythWoven imagines an “alternate universe where I literally go to school forever (for free) so I can learn about art and literature and history and languages for 100 years. No job skills. No credit requirements. No student loans. Just learning.” I have longings like hers. There’s an eternal student within me that wants to be endlessly surprised with exciting information about interesting subjects. I would love to be continually adding fresh skills and aptitudes to my repertoire. In the coming weeks, I will give free rein to that part of me. I recommend you do the same, my fellow Cancerian.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): In 2016, the International Garden Photograph of the Year depicted lush lupine flowers in New Zealand. The sea of tall purple, pink, and blue blooms was praised as “an elegant symphony” and “a joy to behold.” What the judges didn’t mention is that lupine is an invasive species in New Zealand. It forces native plant species out of their habitat, which in turn drives away native animal species, including birds like the wrybill, black stilt, and banded dotterel. Is there a metaphorically comparable phenomenon in your life, Leo? Problematic beauty? Some influence that’s both attractive and prickly? A wonderful thing that can also be troublesome? The coming weeks will be a favorable time to try to heal the predicament.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Several states in the US have statutes prohibiting blasphemy. Saying “God damn it” could theoretically get you fined in Massachusetts, South Carolina, and Wyoming. In the coming days, it’s best to proceed carefully in places like those, since you’ve been authorized by cosmic forces to curse more often and more forcefully than usual. Why? Because you need to summon vivid and intense protests in the face of influences that may be inhibiting and infringing on your soul’s style. You have a poetic license to rebel against conventions that oppress you.

THE ADVICE GODDESS

BY AMY ALKON

DISAPPEAR PRESSURE

Q: I recently met this guy, and we've spent the entire past week together. Unfortunately, he's moving across the country — tomorrow. He asked whether I'd be open to dating after he moved. I panicked and said no — I'm really not looking for long-distance — but now that he's leaving, I'm sad, and I'm worried I've made a mistake. Help!

— Confused

A: Obstacles to love are like situational steroids. We long for what's out of reach — and all the more romantic if reaching it takes crossing the desert on a camel or $553 with a layover in Boise.

The perception that something is in short supply or soon will be (say, because it's about to move across the country) makes it seem more valuable to us. Psychologist Robert Cialdini calls this the “scarcity principle” and explains that the possibility we could lose access to something (or someone) jacks us into a motivational state: Go! Chase it! Don't let it get away!

The scarcity principle is the psychological scheming behind ads like: “Today only!” and “Only one sofa at this price!” The looming scarcity (or “scarcity”) shuts down your Department of Reasoning, basically turning you into a dog chasing a couch-shaped squirrel. Only after you buy the thing and get it home (P.S. “no returns!”) do you notice an important fact: It will fit perfectly in your living room... if you take a sledgehammer to part of a wall and — “surprise!” — extend one end into your neighbor's apartment.

Recognizing how scarcity primes us to see through loss-prevention-colored glasses, do your best to set aside “Eek! He's leaving!” and objectively assess what you two have. In short, is he (and how you are together) so extraordinary — so near-impossible to find locally — that the thousands of dollars in travel costs and other trade-offs of long-distance might be worth it? If so, just tell him you'd like to try long-distance and see how it goes.

Should you decide your feelings were more about the circumstances than the guy, well, you're not alone. Impossible love brings out the drama queeny 14-year-old in many of us. Imagine if Romeo and Juliet's parents, instead of forbidding their love, were all, “Hey, you crazy kids...have fun at the movies!” The play would've become a hate story for the ages -- after things between them inevitably got kinda meh and Juliet walked in on Romeo in bed with her BFF and her lady-in-waiting.

TALES FROM THE DECRYPTED

Q: I really appreciate my boyfriend, except for one thing: his constantly posting photos and videos that include me on his Facebook or Instagram. I'm a pretty private person, and I told him I don't like having my life and our life together posted online. He grudgingly agreed to stop posting things about me, but he thinks I'm being unreasonable and “paranoid.”

— Discreet

A: “Online privacy” is a quaint fiction. The reality: Any info about you, from your sexts to your Social Security number, is probably stealable by any basement nospicker with an IQ over 125.

That said, it's understandable you'd try to retain whatever shreds of yours you can — like by engaging in the “impression management” sociologist Erving Goffman observed we all do face to face: tailoring the “self” we present and revealing more or fewer “regions” of ourselves, depending on the particular audience.

There's probably no person these days who can't be “canceled” — out of a job, any ability to keep earning a living, and/or their social world — by some photo, video, or quote from them that's cast in a bad light by an internet mob.

Take the San Diego Gas & Electric worker photographed driving with his hand hanging out of his truck window in what was claimed on social media to be a “white supremacy” hand signal. (The OK sign is said to make the initials W.P. for “White Power.”) The man — who is Mexican American! — insisted he was doing nothing of the sort, but the utility fired him anyway. “To lose your dream job for playing with your fingers, that's a hard pill to swallow,” he told NBC 7 San Diego.

Your boyfriend might never agree with your approach to online privacy. However, he might understand it — and gain a deeper understanding into who you are -- if you evoke his empathy. Instead of simply telling him you “don't like” to appear in social media posts, go into detail about your fears and discomfort at allowing an unselect audience a window into your life.

It's awful enough when we violate our own privacy -- like by accidentally sexting Grandma and then rushing over in hopes of deleting it before she remembers where she left her phone. There's really no hope of privacy crime scene cleanup when your audience is “everyone on the planet but three Namibian guys whose goats keep chewing through their cable.”
